Launched in 1997, this online journal seeks to advance scholarly debates and understanding about U.S. women’s history at all levels. From more than 500 years of history, we’ve selected the best materials for teaching and learning.

More than 2,700 authors have written and curated 200,000+ pages of innovative scholarship, primary documents, books, images, essays, book and website reviews, teaching tools and more. The project combines the analytic power of a database with the new scholarly insights of a peer-reviewed journal.

In 2004, founding editors Thomas Dublin and Kathryn Kish Sklar transformed the database into an online peer-reviewed journal, which they continued to edit until 2019. It is now published, as Series II, under an editorial team headed by Judy Tzu-Chun Wu and Rebecca Jo Plant with support from the University of California, Irvine and San Diego.

Topics covered:
- Gender & Sexuality
- Human Rights
- Political Science
- Social Justice
- Social Sciences
- U.S History
- Women’ Rights

Meet the Editors: Judy Tzu-Chun Wu and Rebecca Jo Plant

Judy Tzu-Chun Wu and Rebecca Jo Plant are the current editors overseeing Women and Social Movements in the U.S. Wu and Plant have introduced some new features and content to their edition of the collection, such as:
- More multi-format content, including video for a more dynamic, immersive learning and research experience
- Bi-annual e-journal publications organized according to theme, available as add-on modules
- Examples of art as a form of social protest

Judy Tzu-Chun Wu is a professor of Asian American Studies at the University of California, Irvine and director of the Humanities Center. She received her Ph.D. in U.S. History from Stanford University and previously taught at Ohio State University. She authored Dr. Mom Chung of the Fair-Haired Bastards: the Life of a Wartime Celebrity (University of California Press, 2006) and Radicals on the Road: Internationalism, Orientalism, and Feminism during the Vietnam Era (Cornell University Press, 2013). Her current book project, a collaboration with political scientist Gwendolyn Mink, explores the political career of Patsy Takemoto Mink, the first woman of color U.S. congressional representative and the namesake for Title IX. Wu also is working on a book that focuses on Asian American and Pacific Islander women who attended the 1977 National Women’s Conference. She co-edited Women’s America: Refocusing the Past, 8th Edition (Oxford 2015), Gendering the Trans-Pacific World (Brill 2017), and Frontiers: A Journal of Women’s Studies (2012-2017).

Rebecca Jo Plant is an associate professor in History at the University of California, San Diego. The author of Mom: The Transformation of Motherhood in Modern America, and co-editor of Maternalism Reconsidered: Motherhood, Welfare, and Social Policies in the Twentieth Century, she has held major fellowships from the American Association of University Women, the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study, the American Council of Learned Societies, and the Australian Research Council. Along with Frances M. Clarke, she won the 2015 Letitia Woods Brown Memorial Prize and Berkshire Conference of Women Historians’ Prize for best article for “The Crowning Insult: Federal Segregation and the Gold Star Mother and Widow Pilgrimages of the Early 1930s” (Journal of American History).
Series II: Fall Issue 2021

Document projects:
- Alina R. Méndez, Gendered Invisibility: Ethnic Mexican Women and the Bracero Program, focuses on the Bracero Program (1942-1964), under which thousands of Mexicans came to the United States as contract laborers. Documents, drawn from both U.S. and Mexican archives, include letters that women sent to the Mexican president, newspaper articles, a notarized statement by the widow of bracero, and photographs and oral histories collected by the Bracero History Archive.
- Rima Lunin Schultz, The Wife of Jane Addams, documents draw primarily on letters between Mary Roset Smith and Addams, as well as correspondence with friends, the project illuminates one of the most consequential and richly documented same-sex relationships in American history.

Series II: Gender and the State: Spring Issue 2022

This issue focuses on the history and politics of motherhood, reproduction, and public policy in the mid-to-late twentieth century. Taken as a whole, the issue raises themes that remain extremely pressing today: the lack of childcare as a social necessity for fostering greater female participation in the workforce, the difficulty of fostering an intersectional politics that can adequately address the situation that African American women face as workers and caregivers; and the ongoing attacks on Roe v. Wade by anti-choice activists who now appear on the cusp of achieving their goal of overturning this critical legal precedent.

Document projects:
- Revisiting the President’s Commission on the Status of Women through the Activism of Dorothy Height, President of the National Council of Negro Women, and Her Part in the Emergence of New Forms of Women’s Activism, 1961-1966 by Katherine Kish Sklar and Keisha Blain analyzes Height’s political engagements in the early 1960s to underscore her innovative intersectional initiatives.
- Securing Childcare during World War II: The Case of San Diego by Kyle Ciani offers a ground-level view of how this particular city—which quickly emerged as a center of wartime industry—contended with the challenges of meeting the childcare needs of a diverse population that included both newcomers (or “immigrants”) and long-time residents.

Roundtable Discussion: On the Threshold of a Post-Roe Era? The Past and Future of Abortion Rights in the United States, three leading experts on the history of abortion and the politics surrounding it—Karissa Haugeberg, Rickie Solinger, and Mary Ziegler—offer thoughtful commentaries on how we arrived at this point and what we can likely anticipate going forward.

Series II: Fall Issue 2022

This issue focuses on new scholarship that is revisiting and reassessing the contributions of the 1970s feminist movement and its legacies. The issue’s cover image shows Patsy Mink testifying at a Senate confirmation hearing in January 1970 against Supreme Court nominee G. Harrold Carswell, who was ultimately rejected, in large part for having supported segregation earlier in his career. With the Fall 2022 issue, explore two new document projects, several book reviews and a roundtable discussion.

Document projects:
- “Fierce and Feminist: Patsy Takemoto Mink, the First Woman of Color in Congress,” cowritten by Judy Tzu-Chun Wu and Gwendolyn Mink, focuses on the career and legacy of Patsy Takemoto Mink.
- “From Margin to Center: California Women and the National Women’s Conference,” coauthored by Haleigh Marcello, Stephanie Narrow, and Judy Tzu-Chun Wu, zeroes in on the state that sent the largest, and in many ways the most progressive, delegation to the 1977 National Women’s Conference (NWC) in Houston, Texas.

Roundtable Discussion: “Sharing Stories from 1977: Creating a Feminist Digital Humanities Project” that highlights a massive, crowd-sourced research effort to collect and make accessible the histories of the National Women’s Conference. Join the members of the team that is leading the project Sharing Stories from 1977 about a discussion on feminist digital humanities.

Series II: Spring Issue 2023

Document projects:
- How Did Black Women Struggle to Bring White Suffragists to Their Citizenship Cause in 1921? by Tom Dublin highlights this struggle by zeroing in the efforts of Addie Hunton and other women associated with the NAACP who pressured Alice Paul of the National Woman’s Party to take a stand against disfranchisement. The featured documents reveal how Black women fought back against attempts to marginalize them within the broader struggle for women’s rights, and how Paul and other NWP leaders resisted their appeals by attempting to frame discrimination on the basis of race as outside their purview.
- Do not toss this letter away’. Women’s Hardship Petitions to the U.S. Federal Government during the Civil War by Cayla Regas, John Gove, Frances M. Clarke, and Rebecca Jo Plant, features white women’s petitions to President Lincoln, the War Department, and other officials. These documents show how the crisis of war led women to use an old method of political redress—petitioning—in new ways. For the first time, many thousands of ordinary women appealed to the federal government for personal assistance, requesting the release husbands and sons from military service or other interventions to ease their plight. Above all, their letters vividly illuminate the war’s emotional and economic toll on women left to tend families and make ends meet in the absence of male support.

Other issues in Series II include:
- Internationalizing and Transnationalizing U.S Women’s History: Focuses broadly on the theme of American women and internationalism, encompassing women’s activities outside the U.S. and their personal connections and engagement with international issues across national boundaries.
- Sexualities and Bodies: Focuses on the lived experiences of transgender people and LGBTQ+ allies.
- Women’s Citizenship and State Power: Focuses on questions of women’s citizenship and state power in the mid-twentieth century U.S.
- Having it All: Lucy Stone, Motherhood, and the Women’s Rights Movement, 1851-1893
- The National Organization for Women, the Equal Rights Amendment and California NOW Chapters’ Lesbian Feminist Activism

These dynamic collections provide new ways of looking at the U.S. in its global context. For instance, our document cluster "African American and Black African Women Build Civil Society in South Africa, 1920-1960" focuses on the interactions of African American and Black South African women in advancing mutual aid associations in South Africa in the first four decades of the 20th century. Through groups like the Bantu Women's League, the Bantu Youth League, and the Unity Home-Makers’ Club, Black South African women introduced self-help organizations modeled after African American women's clubs. African American women supported these efforts. Together these women-founded and led associations that improved the lives of Black South Africans prior to Apartheid, combatting, for example, an inferior and inadequate education system and restrictive labor laws. In a tumultuous political landscape, they simultaneously challenged imperialism and beliefs about racial inferiority.

Women and Social Movements in Modern Empires since 1820 document clusters:

- American Women Missionaries in India, 1910-1953, edited by Ann Taylor Allen
- Anti-Imperialist Writings of Cuban Feminists, 1896-1985, edited by Lynn Stoner

Women and Social Movements, International, 1840-present includes 150,000 pages of conference proceedings, reports of international women's organizations, publications, diaries, and memoirs of women active internationally since the mid-nineteenth century, as well as selected web pages of women's non-governmental organizations. Many themes recur, such as the promotion of women's legal and civil rights, access to jobs and education, provisions for women's health, and building women's networks and collective voices through conferences and journals.
